Chief Natches.

A pretty good Indian story comes from Fort Apache and its truth is fully vouched for. Along about May 27th, Chief Natcha, or Natches, as it is sometimes spelled, together with several other Indians of his band. went inside the lines guarding the White Mountain Indians at the Fort, in broad daylight. They mingled with the other Indians unobserved by the soldlers and made good their axit before the next mercing. Fort Apache is within the referention boundaries." its way to this office to-day testifies to, and is about skrip inites as the crow flies from the San Carlos agency, Natches is a large and powerful man, and he certainly ought to be easily

The old chief had a narrow escape after all; but as a miss is as good as a mile, it is anther of those lost opportunities where one's hindsight is so some months engaged in mining in much superior to his foresight. In dismounting to pass the guards the animals were turned loose and the saddles hung up in trees for a hiding place as well as a signal, for the Indians reasoned that if the saddlee were seen and hostiles suspected to be near, the troops would take the saddles down. They could be seen across the arrova for some distance. Captain Morrison did discover the saddles and laid his plans to ambush the hostiles when they returned for them. It's was wise enough not to touch the sig usls, but he so placed his troop that when the Indians came up he was sure to get them. The soldiers laid low and after their patience was almost exhausted, sure erough along came the hostiles. They were seen some distance away and a low command of caution kept them quiet for some time. At length one very impatient buffalo soldier could restrain bleself no longer, and he must raise di his head and take a look at the approaching enemy. The Indians saw him and at once scattered and fled, and the plan failed. They were on the boundary line recently run trailed to near Hooker's hot springs and then up into the Galiuria mountains, where they waded streams and the trail became lost. They doubtless found others awaiting them in that same rendezvous and from the full band the various sortied have been made by small deachments,-Cit-

PREACHER BEAN. Arizona's Jolly Delegate Taken for a Gospel Sharp.

Speaking of ministers of the gospel, a true and by no means bad story is affoat on Delegate Bean of Arizona Territory, which is thus told by the Washington correspondent of the Kansas City Times:

It seems that the Arizona delegate, who enjoys a wide reputation in his country as a mining prospector and general "grob staker" to all the old miners of that section, took a notion that he would like to hear Brother Newman preach. Ex-Mayor Emory. one of the headlights of the "Metropolitan church with the chimes at tached," kindly tendered Delegate Bean the ass of his pew and last Sunday he trooped down upon the sexton, accompanied by Mrs. Bean and Mrs. Colonel Baker and his three daughters, introduced himself and requested to be shown to Mr. Emory's pew. The sexton waited until the church had filled to overflowing and then, with great impressment, Leaded the procession and Marched Mr. Bean and his family up through the airle to the front seat in the synagogue, immediately facing he preacher. Brother Newman eyed the Arizona man On motion, A. G. Howe County with great interest and the latter become very uneasy at the scrudny. Be fore commencing the sermon Brother Newman, without taking his eyes off Mr. Fean, said: "At this period of the year it is quite likely that many ministers of the gospel and laymen are visiting the Capital and I shall be glad to meet and greet them after the services are concluded." It then flashed across the mind of the Ar zona delegace that he had on his "store clothes" and wore a white cravat, and that his effort to look intensely respectful and religious, coupled with the fact that he was occupying ex-Mayor Emory's pew, nad been constructed by Brother Newman and the sexton to indicate that he was a clergyman from abroad. This naturally distracted Mr. Bean's attention from the sermon and he wished himself well out of the scrape a thousand times. At fast the service were or cluded and the doxology rendered. but! observing that Brother Newman's eigle eye was still fixed upon him and escape was practically impossible, he concluded to run the gauntlet and explain the evident mistake. So he went forward to the preacher and in troduced himself and his good folk. about as follows: "I am Mr. Pean, of Arizona; this is Mrs. Bean and Mrs Colonel Baker! these are my daugh > home," replied Brother Newman, shaking hands all tround. "Where do you live in the Terri-

"At Prespott," replied Mr. Bean. "Ah," rejoined Brother Newman, you have a fine climate there; have you a large congregation worshipping at your church?"

"About 333 members in good fellowship attend our church," replied Mr. Bean; "but I am not the pastor; I am not a clergyman."

"Ah, indeed," ejaculated Brother Newman, and a look of disappoin ment mantled his face. "Permit me to express my regret. You would certainly be taken for a clergyman anywhere." Brother Bean withdrew his forces in as good order as possible and retreated safely to his home. As soon as the family re-established itself under its own vine and fig tree, it occurred to Mrs. Bean to ask her husband why he had not informed Brother Newman that he was a ment-

"Do you think," replied Mr. Bean, I was going to tell Brother Newman that I was nothing but a Territorial delegate, without a vote, and the identical man who introduced the sult would have been a fight or a foot race. I did not want to argue the Indian question with the "Bue was dat fdo theer," queries his good wife," by telling Parson your charch is good tellowship?"

"Mary Margaret," replied the Arizona delegate, "I am surprised at your dullness. You did not catch on to my little joke at the Pargon's expense. We have 325 members of the house and 8 delegates from the Territories-they are all good fellows, and in good fell wallip with our church on Capitel Hill. Now 325 members and 8 delegates make 333-the magical number of the prophets and soothsavers! While I am sorry for any man's misfortunes, there is a measure of compensation in the fact that our chaplain, Dr. Milburn, is blind, and can't mistake me for a preacher. Besides, Sam Randall and Speaker Carlisle look a heap more like preacher than I do. Ben Butterworth and Tom Ryan might pass for cleigymen, and there is only one member in the House who looks less like a clergyman than myself, and that is Warner of Misseuri."

Gone to Best. A messenger arrived in camp from Fort Muachaca this morning, for a coffin, and bringing the sad intelligence of the death of Frank, the youngest son of Captain Hatfield, U. S A., which occurred last night. The Captain had just reached the fort from a protracted scout after the Apaches, coming in for rations, when he was summoned to the bedside of his dying boy. The little fellow was a bright winsome child aged about five years, and a general favorite with every one The funeral will take place at the Fort to-morrow. The news was re ceived in Tombstone with a deep feewhere he is known and admired for his soldfelly and manly qualities. That the Great Comforter may be present with the bereaved parents in their affliction, is the heirtfelt wish of THE TOMBSTONE.

A Besperate Crimin

About ten o'clock this morning the attention of Jailer Gage was attracted by a noise proceeding from the cell of a prisoner named Douglas, alias Red, confined in the county jail, swaiting trial on a charge of grand larceny. For several days past Douglass has been in a very obstreperous mood, and varied the time between cursing the officials and mashing things up in his cell. Thinking something wrong the juler asked A. J. Godfrey, who was present in the office, to accompany him taside the jail. : Upon reaching the door leading to the tanks the jailer entered and was locked in by Godfrey. Approaching the call occupied by Douglass, it was opened and Douglass ordered to come out. The command was repeated four or tive times before it was obeyed. Upon emerging from the cell it was discovered that Douglass, who a few days before had been decorate I with a pair of shackles, known a. Oregon boots, up, had freed himself from them. Know ing the desperate character of the man, and fearing an attack from such a dangerous weapon as is an Ore, on boot, the jailer covered Douglass with his six-shooter and compelled him to face the corridor wall while he manacled his hands. Upon examining the cell the officer found a piece of a ment the Oregon boot had been unlocked. After taking them off, the prisoner had beaten them one against resolution to offer a reward of $25,000 the other readering them entirely for Geronimo's careas, itend, brudive? useloss.
